Fans of the "King" can look forward to a night of musical brilliance as the acclaimed band, China Blue Rock and its lead guitarist cum vocalist will deliver a mammoth concert featuring a slew of timeless hits from the 90s.

Wu Bai dubbed, "King of Chinese Rock" or "King of Live Music" has been widely recognized by the Asian music industry and media outlets for his creative ability to evoke positive emotions in his audience through heartfelt lyrics. His songs have consistently topped music charts throughout the years.

Hailing from Chiayi County, Wu debuted with 2 songs on the Taiwanese-language, Dust of Angels Soundtrack in 1992. His subsequent releases were followed by live performances at pubs throughout Taiwan. As his fan base increased and he became more well-known, he was able to secure a deal with Rock Records, and his second album, Wanderer's Love Song was released in 1994. More than 600,000 copies were sold in Taiwan, China, Hong Kong, Singapore and Malaysia.

China Blue Rock, which features Dean Zavolta on drums, Yu Ta-hao on keyboards, and Chu Chien-Hui on bass, has often been credited for reinventing Taiwanese rock. In 1996, Wu Bai and his band performed their live concert for the first time in Hong Kong. The performance was a huge success, further propelling them to popularity. The band later released their critically acclaimed album, The End of Love. It is reported that Wu Bai personally writes all of the songs for his albums, in addition to penning songs for a number of A-list performers, including Andy Lau, Emil Chau, Karen Mok, Tracy Su and Vivian Hsu.

An ever-versatile artist, Wu has also established a reputation for himself in the acting industry. He had a major role in Tsui Hark's crime and action thriller, Time and Tide in 2000 and a minor role in the 1998 motion picture and comedy drama, The Personals, which received positive box office sales and reviews.
